

Jun Yu is a Policy Analyst at the Centre for Educational Research and Innovation (CERI) of the OECD Directorate of Education and Skills, working on the project “21st Century Children”. Prior to arriving at the OECD, he worked as a research analyst at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE), working on the projects investigating the social and ethical implications of digital and data technologies and the policies that are designed to regulate their use. He also served in the same university as an Associate Lecturer, teaching extensively on information systems, digital platforms, digital privacy rights, and data and algorithmic justice in societal domains including education. He received his Ph.D. in Media and Communications from LSE, a master’s degree in Sociology from University of Cambridge, and a B.A. in Media and Communications from University of London (Goldsmiths).
